Main Characters

The charm of Kath and Kim lies significantly in its well-drawn characters. The series features a cast of unforgettable personalities, each contributing to the humor and heart of the show.

Kath Day-Knight

- Portrayed by: Jane Turner

- Character Traits: Kath is a warm-hearted, optimistic, and somewhat naive mother who is trying to navigate her life, her relationships, and motherhood. She is often portrayed as the more sensible character compared to Kim, but her naivety leads her into humorous situations.
- Role in the series: Kath is recently divorced and is trying to start anew while being a doting mother to Kim. Her character embodies the struggles and joys of middle age.

Kim Day-Knight

- Portrayed by: Gina Riley
- Character Traits: Kim is self-absorbed, trendy, and often superficial. She is obsessed with her appearance and social status, which leads her to make questionable decisions.
- Role in the series: As Kath's daughter, Kim's antics often create conflict and hilarity. Her relationship with her mother is central to the show's narrative, blending love with a dose of teenage rebellion.

Supporting Characters

- Barry (portrayed by Peter Rowsthorn): Kath's former husband who is often oblivious and bumbling, yet he brings an endearing quality to the show.
- Kel Knight (portrayed by Glenn Robbins): Kath's new love interest, a butcher with a penchant for the dramatic. His relationship with Kath adds layers to her character and the series.
- Brett (portrayed by Matt Day): Kim's on-again, off-again boyfriend, who often serves as a foil to Kim's outrageous behavior.
