Resurrection and Rebirth

A central theme in "Lady Lazarus" is the idea of resurrection. Drawing from the biblical figure of Lazarus, who was raised from the dead by Jesus, Plath uses this motif to illustrate her own experiences with death and rebirth. The speaker claims:

> "I rise / With my red hair / And I eat men like air."

Identity and Selfhood

Another significant theme in the poem is the exploration of identity. Plath's speaker grapples with her sense of self amid societal pressures and expectations. The line:

> "I am a woman, / I am a man, / I am a child" reflects the multifaceted nature of identity, where the speaker embodies various roles and personas. This fluidity suggests a struggle for autonomy in a world that often seeks to define women in limiting terms.

Feminism and Gender Politics

"Lady Lazarus" can also be interpreted as a feminist statement. Plath critiques the patriarchal society that seeks to silence and control women. The speaker's defiance against her oppressors is evident in lines such as:
