Top Players with Most 60 Yard Touchdowns in NFL History

Several NFL players have set themselves apart by scoring an exceptional number of 60 yard touchdowns, demonstrating not only speed but also vision and breakaway ability. These players come from various positions, primarily wide receivers and running backs, who have the opportunity to exploit open field and defensive lapses. The record for most 60 yard touchdowns is a testament to consistent big-play capability and endurance in the league.

Wide Receivers Leading in Long Touchdowns

Wide receivers have traditionally been the most prolific scorers of long touchdowns in the NFL. Their combination of route-running precision, speed, and elusiveness has enabled them to break free for 60+ yard scores repeatedly. Legendary receivers like Jerry Rice, Randy Moss, and Calvin Johnson have contributed significantly to the tally of long touchdown plays, with some approaching or surpassing double-digit counts in this category.

Running Backs with High 60 Yard Touchdown Totals

While wide receivers dominate in long touchdown receptions, elite running backs have also made their mark with long touchdown runs and receptions exceeding 60 yards. Players such as Barry Sanders, Adrian Peterson, and Jamaal Charles are known for their explosive speed and ability to turn routine plays into lengthy touchdown runs. Their skill set often includes breakaway speed and agility that enable them to evade multiple defenders over extended distances.

Top 5 NFL Players by Most 60 Yard Touchdowns
