This case emphasizes the importance of sustainability in business strategy and the challenges of implementing ethical practices on a global scale.

Methodologies for Case Discussions

At Ross, various methodologies are employed to facilitate effective case discussions. These include:

1. The Socratic Method

The Socratic method encourages a dialogue-based approach where students ask and answer questions to stimulate critical thinking. This method fosters a deeper understanding of the case material and encourages students to articulate their thoughts clearly.

2. Group Work and Presentations

Students often work in groups to analyze case studies and present their findings to the class. This collaborative approach allows for diverse perspectives and encourages teamwork.

3. Role-playing

In some cases, students may take on the roles of key stakeholders within the case, such as company executives or customers. This technique helps students understand different viewpoints and the complexities of decision-making in business.

4. Data Analysis and Financial Modeling

Students may also engage in quantitative analyses, utilizing data to support their arguments. This approach enhances their analytical skills and provides a practical understanding of financial implications.

Skills Developed Through Business Case Discussions

Engaging in business case discussions at Ross equips students with a multitude of essential skills, including:

1. Analytical Skills: Students learn to dissect complex business problems, identify key issues, and evaluate potential solutions.
2. Decision-Making: The process of weighing pros and cons prepares students to make informed decisions in their future careers.
3. Communication: Articulating thoughts and presenting findings sharpen verbal communication skills, essential for professional success.

4. Teamwork: Collaborative assignments foster the ability to work effectively in teams, a crucial skill in any business environment.

5. Ethical Consideration: Many cases highlight ethical dilemmas, encouraging students to think about the broader impact of business decisions.
